We always have our first on the left, next on the right. Sunday morning I woke up with sore upper back muscles and I'm pretty sure I'm beat. I didn't feel much like playing today. If you ask about a work project for the day (which you didn't because you're smart, but let me tell you about it anyways) I'd say I'm done. Besides not wanting to play with my kid, I couldn't do some of the things I wanted to do either. I can still drive to the store, but I'm not moving much. I hate these kind of days! I 3a67dffeec

What's New In?

Organize, organize, organize. Save the most important stuff to the cloud. See what is going on around you in real-time. Quickly and simply find your pictures, videos and docs. Which is the best storage for you? When you're working on your documents, images or videos, you want to find them easily. That's why a lot of people use cloud storage. Dropbox or Google Drive offer unlimited storage for you, but is it enough for all the stuff in your devices? It's not a good idea to save all your important files there, because somebody would need to open it with your permission. Also, sharing doesn't need to be so complicated. You shouldn't have to download a separate app to see what's going on in your phone. Let's take a look at several cloud-based applications which could be of your help. Sync to the cloud Put away your mouse and keyboard and let the magic of the cloud make your life easier. Tether, an app from Mozilla, is an offline-first, open source browser for Android. It is lightweight, fast and offers an advanced rendering engine. Even if you don't need a web connection, Tether will still make sure that you can use your browser to read e-books and watch videos offline. That's a really good option to save your data usage. Safe and secure Besides the fact that Tether is powered by Mozilla, it includes two of the most popular HTML5 features. IndexedDB and WebSocket make it possible to store and display your data in real-time without being connected to the Internet. As well, Tether is stored in a way that it is impossible to see or edit any sensitive data before you open them. Share documents PDF viewer is the best option to open documents. You can either use Tether's built-in PDF viewer, or save the files on the cloud and open them later. That way, you can just find the files you need, no matter where you put them. Each of the supported web services comes with a built-in PDF viewer. Even if you choose to download the PDF viewer separately, the advantage is that it might become a part of your system and you won't need to open the files in the browser any longer. Setting up Tether is very easy. All you have to do is to download the app and open the settings. You are basically asked to choose a launcher and to add different services. As
